THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 8, 1882.

CONVICTED BY A MONKEY .- The case "a monkey on the witness stand," reported from India, does not seem to be an isolated one. Domestic animals have many times played the part of the dog of Montargis in revealing crime, and wicked men need to hide their deeds from eyes, in addition to their ordinary secrecy.

In England not long ago, some foot-pads attacked a traveling musician, injured him severly and robbed him of all his money. The musician had several monkeys, all of which were killed except one. That one escated by climbing a tree.

As soon as the robbers had disappeared, the monkey came down the tree and ran to the nearest house. Its antics and cries induced a man to follow him to the spot where the musician was.

Afterward some men were arrested on suspicion of the robbery. The monkey was brought before them. As soon as the little animal saw the men, he began to scream and | Friday evening. leap toward them, which convinced the officers that the prisoners were guilty of the crime.
